

Figure 2.1 Definitions of a (a) streamline and a (b) streamtube.

Figure 2.2 Streamtube used to derive the energy equation.

Figure 2.3 An elemental cylindrical streamtube.

Figure 2.4 Siphon arrangement for Example 2.1.

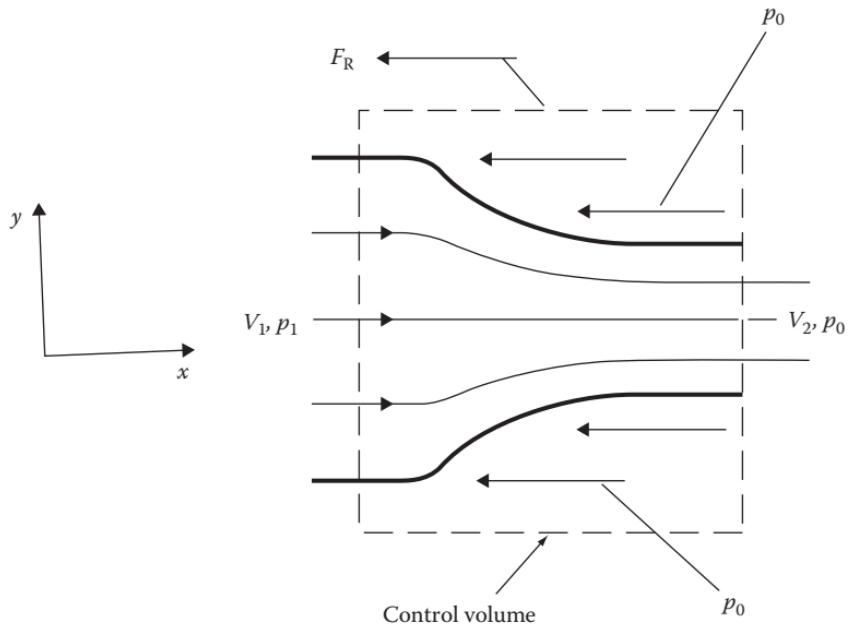

Figure 2.5 Forces on a nozzle.

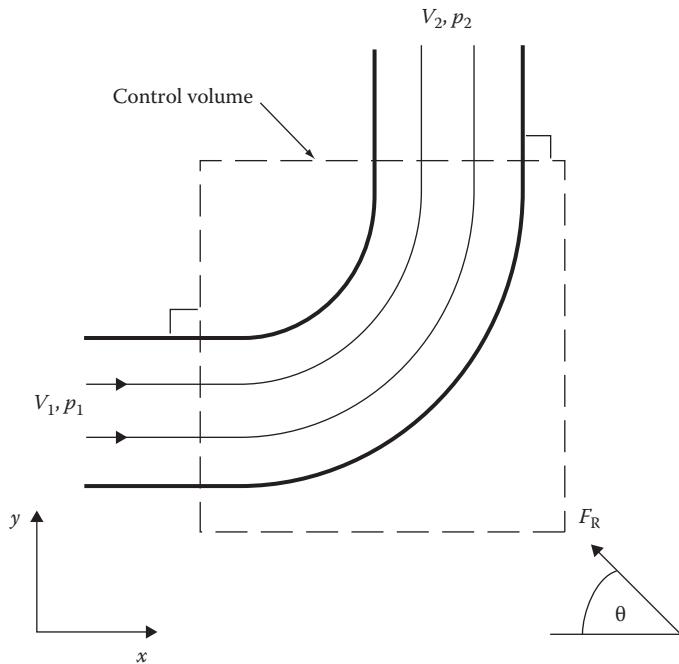

Figure 2.6 Forces on a pipe bend.

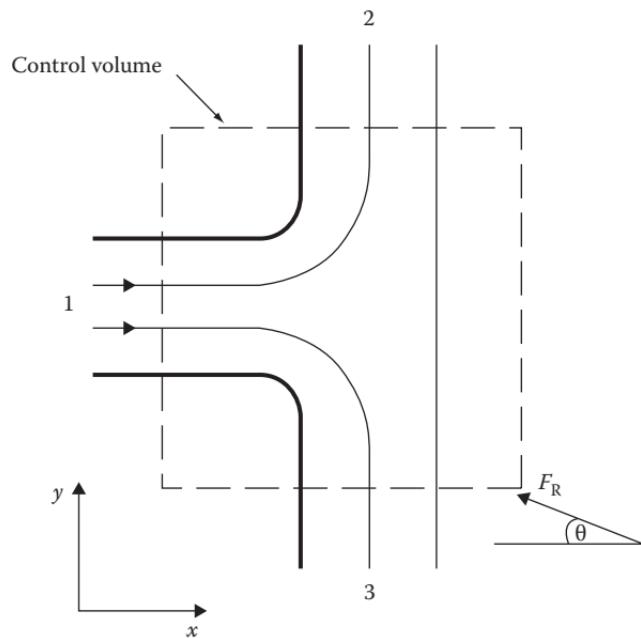

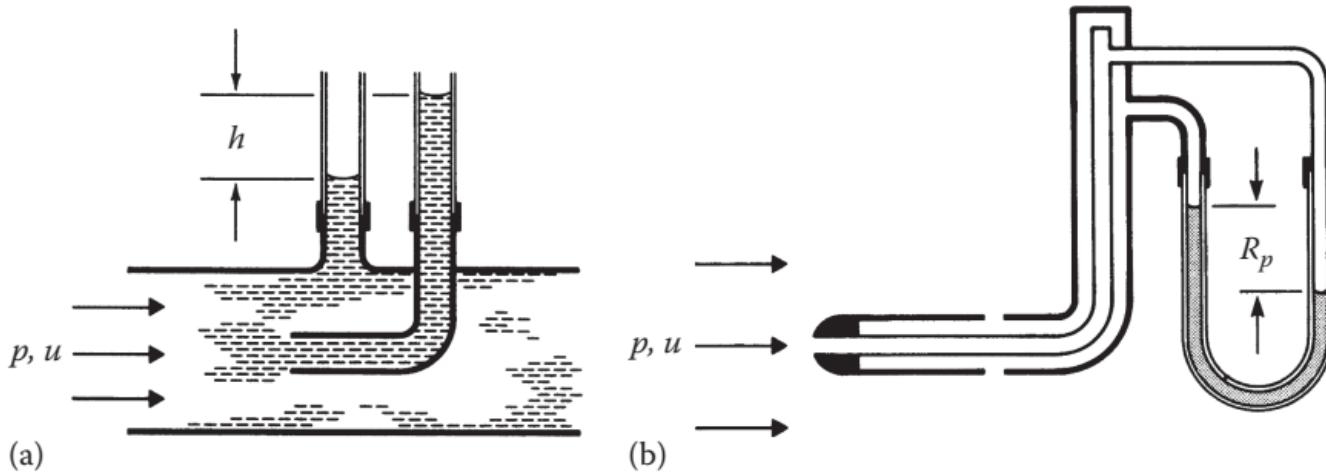

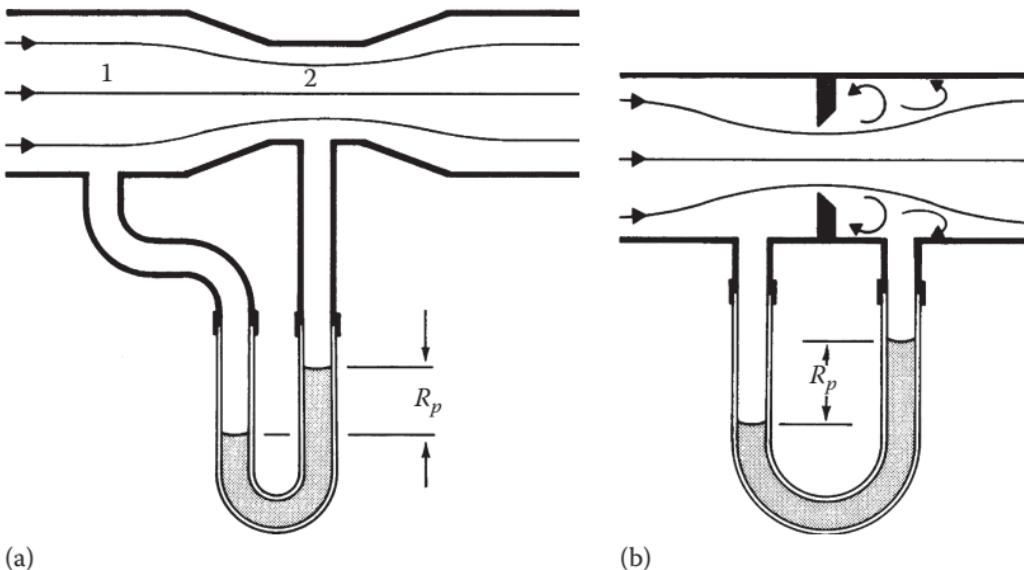

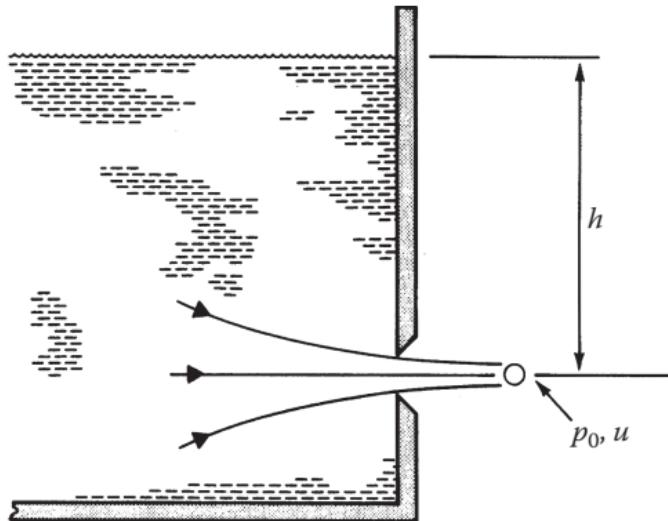

Figure 2.7 Forces on a T-junction.

Figure 2.8 Velocity measurement. (a) Pitot tube and (b) pitot static tube.

Figure 2.9 Discharge measurement. (a) Venturi meter and (b) orifice plate.

Figure 2.10 Discharge through a small orifice.

Figure 2.11 Discharge through a large orifice.

Figure 2.12 Two-dimensional flow.

Figure 2.13 Components of flow in Cartesian coordinates.

Figure 2.14 Rotational and irrotational flows. (a) Initial position, (b) position after unit time and (c) alternative position after unit time.

Figure 2.15 Rectilinear flow.

Figure 2.16 Addition of two rectilinear flows (Example 2.6).

Figure 2.17 Radial flow.

Figure 2.18 Flow in a curved path.

Figure 2.19 Definition diagram for vorticity and circulation.

Figure 2.20 Streamline pattern – source, plus linear flow (Example 2.8).